

Kolby Moore

Kolby is the daughter of David and Kirby Moore of Gill, CO, and is a 9-year member of the New Horizons 4-H Club and some of her projects included baking, clothing construction and horse. She is presently a senior at Platte Valley High School where she is involved in student council, national honor society, knowledge bowl, future business leaders of America, band (concert, marching and pep), student government, volleyball and, track and field.

Her first year in 4-H she participated in baking, clothing construction and horse projects. She had an endless passion to always be doing her best in each of the projects she took on. As she progressed through the years she concentrated on clothing construction and horse projects pouring her time into both and eventually added horse judging to her list. She qualified and placed many times at state with her clothing construction.

Kolby's true winnings were the personal and professional skills she gained from her participation in 4-H with the clothing construction and horse projects she worked on, and she learned through her mistakes that she could either quit or continue on, she chose to continue.

The most important part of 4-H to Kolby is the service she has been involved in throughout her community. Her club would spend time on community service projects trying to make the lives of those around easier and happier, and one example would be sending boxes to the troops overseas, in which they would receive thank you notes and photos in return. Her time spent with animals, on projects, doing record books and participating in community service has shaped her into the person she is today.

To achieve the goals she has set for herself in doing something of importance in the lives of people; once she graduates, she plans to attend Colorado State University majoring in biomedical sciences. She hopes to make connections with people in this field to procure internships and shadowing positions down the road. She hopes to continue working with Banner Health through college and beyond, and she will continue volunteering as an assistant coach for the Weld County 4-H Horse Judging Team this year.

Kolby Moore is the recipient of the Paul & Jean Hoshiko Family Memorial 4-H Scholarship.
